MORNING, MISS MOO STORY OF AN ORNERLY CAT

Trafford Publishing. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 16 pages. Dimensions: 8.2in. x 8.2in. x 0.1in. Carrie Dow of Lakewood, CO, has published her first book for children, Morning, Miss Moo (Story of an Ornerly Cat), by Trafford Publishing. Dow used her own cat, a stray she and her husband found behind the garage, as inspiration for the story. According to Dow, the cat causes a lot of trouble. But we still love her, she says. Pets are a lot like children, in that they do things that we dont always approve of, she states. While their actions may be inappropriate, their intentions are good. Thats what I wanted to convey in the story. The Dows named her Miss Moo because instead of saying meow like other cats, she says, moo. Its not quite meow, but its not quite mew either. Its very strange and silly, the author says. The author also says people tell her they see their own cats in Miss Moos ornerly actions. People tell me all the time that their cat does something that just drives them up the wall, yet they cant help laughing. Thats why we love them so much! Dow created the book with the help of her friend, Roxanne Macke of Broomfield, CO. Macke, a graphic artist, was able to use digital photos of Miss Moo and put them into her illustrations. Dow is hoping to turn the book into a series with other misadventures to follow. What can I say Shes a very ornerly cat, which provides me with a lot of material. The book is currently available online at Amazon and Barnes and Noble and in house at the Tattered Cover Bookstores in Denver, CO, and the Boulder Book Store in Boulder, CO. It was also featured on Colorado and Company (KUSA Channel...
