When he has found that a certain hand-movement has made the stimulus of comparison just noticeably greater or less than the standard, he will expect the same movement to make it just noticeably greater or less again. He will be all the more tempted to judge in terms of hand-movement from the fact that he has been all his life forming estimates of space in terms of the sensations produced by movement, and has probably never thought of taking pains to compare the intensity of two odors. This tendency varies much in different subjects. Its presence may be suspected when the mean variation of a series is very small. Fortunately, it acts in such a way as rather to conceal the operation of Weber s law, if applicable, than to make it appear applicable if it were not. If, for example, one finds A_r to be 5 mm. for a standard of 20 mm., and by repeating the series of movements, obtains the same value of A_r for a standard of 40 mm., A_r will r be in the one case, and in the other. As a matter of fact our results offer evidence for the law which is strong to an almost suspicious degree. Yet it is not probable that a trained subject would, or that an untrained subject could deliberately alter his movements, when the standwas varied, so as to keep the value of A_y approximately...
