Excerpt: .essential tenet of the faith which was once delivered to the saints, and for which that Apostle exhorts us earnestly to contend. His exhortation, it should be remarked, is especially applicable and stirring against any who should explode or disesteem this doctrine of revealed, as well as of natural religion; for immediately after giving that exhortation, St. Jude marks out as persons ordained to condemnation--not ordained, be it observed, to the ungodliness which provoked it--those who had adopted a belief subversive of morality, and tending to licentiousness. For, he adds, there are certain men crept in unawares who were before of old ordained to this condemnation; ungodly men, turning the grace of God to lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ. The men who had crept in unawares were not, it seems evident, those who, under the bias of corrupt...
